Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The 2012 United Way workplace campaign is now underway, and as union members we are aware of the importance of unity and solidarity. I urge your support in coming together to support these campaigns in the community where our members live and work.

What matters to the Office and Professional Employees International Union is that we help make a difference in the lives of many people who are unable to provide for basic necessities or have access to essential services by responding generously to United Way campaigns.

What matters to United Way are bottom line results; the lives that are changed; the communities that they help to shape; and that the results far outweigh the activities.

The partnership between United Way and organized labor has been helping working families and their communities since 1947 and has grown and is now operating at a level like we've never had before.

Through the AFL-CIO Community Services Network, the United Way and the AFL-CIO have liaisons and labor agencies in communities across the country working with our members and developing new partnerships and allies. All of this is made possible through donations from our members to the United Way.

Once again, I ask that you support the 2012 United Way workplace campaign and encourage others members to participate.

Thank you for helping to make your communities better places to live and work.

In Solidarity,
