

Working Women Have Something to Say . . .

It is time again for the Ask A Working Woman Survey. Women have something to say about the economy, health care, balancing family and work, and jobs. We want to hear it!

Every two years the AFL-CIO and Working America conduct a survey to capture the views of working women. Participating in the Ask a Working Woman survey will give you a chance to tell us how you feel about your job, how the recession has affected your family and what you hope and worry the next five years will bring. We'll take what you and tens of thousands of other women tell us and make sure decision makers and the media hear what you have to say.

Our last survey in 2008 resulted in thousands of responses from women across the country. This year we want to reach even more women. Survey results will be an invaluable tool for moving working women's issues into the national dialogue.

Please take time TODAY to complete this short survey. Take the 2010 Ask a Working Woman survey.

Tell other women about this survey at <http://aaww.questionpro.com>. Pass it on to family and friends.