Executive Board Elects Corbeil New S-T

Upon the retirement of long-time Secretary-Treasurer William A. Lowe, the duties of that office will be assumed by Canadian Director and International Vice President Romeo Corbeil, reports International President John Kelly. In January Lowe announced his retirement, effective May 1, 1983. And, at a special OPEIU Executive Board meeting in February, Corbeil was unanimously elected to serve out the term as Secretary-Treasurer until elections at the June OPEIU Convention.

Corbeil comes to the office with a long history of labor movement and OPEIU leadership. In 1956 he was hired by OPEIU as an organizer. Corbeil immediately began to organize new units in Quebec with particular emphasis upon Montreal Local 57, that had only 100 members at that time.

By the end of 1958 the Local had increased its rolls fourfold. Within 10 years after Corbeil had been hired, Montreal Local 57 had become a large, substantial union with more than 1,700 members and five full-time representatives.

Under Corbeil's direction, the Montreal membership continued to grow. By late 1974, Local 57 had passed the 3,000-member mark, standing as the second-largest OPEIU union in Canada and sixth in the entire International Union.

Romeo Corbeil was named regional director for eastern Canada in 1969 and became an International Vice President at the 1971 Convention. In 1974, in addition to his Executive Board position, Corbeil was chosen as Canadian director for the International Union.

One of Corbeil's major campaigns was a drive to enroll the bank clericals at the Montreal City and District Savings Bank (La Banque d'Epargne de la Cité et du District de Montréal) in late 1966. Clerks signed membership cards by the hundreds, and in 1967 the unit at the main headquarters and 57 branches was chartered. Due to their OPEIU membership and the leadership of Romeo Corbeil, the bank workers, who had been among the lowest paid, became the best-paid and best-protected in Canada. This successful new unit was separetly chartered as Local 434.

The classes focused on instilling skills in OPEIU job stewards that would better enable them to represent their members in the grievance procedure. They covered informal bargaining with management prior to filing a grievance, the difference between a grievance and a complaint or problem, techniques for investigating a grievance, and the importance of the voice of the electorate—OPEIU’s political action fund, and an organizer who informs the non-members.

Put People First,
Canada's Bishops Ask

Industrialized democracies must reorder their values and priorities to meet peoples' basic social and economic needs, the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops warned in a statement on the first world's current economic crisis.

"From the standpoint of the church's social teachings, the bishops said, 'we firmly believe that present economic realities reveal a moral dislocation that affects all classes of society.'

"The current recession appears to be symptomatic of a much larger structural crisis in the international system of capitalism."

Capital takes precedent

In an age of automation and computers where human work is rapidly being replaced by machines, "capital" is asserted as the dominant organizing principle of economic life, the statement noted.

This orientation directly contradicts the ethical principle that labor, not capital, must be given priority in the development of an economy based on justice.

"There is, in other words, an ethical order in which human labor, the subject of production, shall precede over capital and technology. This is the priority of labor principle."

While directed mainly at the Canadian economy, the bishops' statement has wide applicability to other industrialized economies. Like the U.S. economy, the Canadian economy is in recession with double-digit unemployment.

This statement was issued by the CCCB's Commission on Social Affairs, relies heavily on Pope John Paul II's 1981 encyclical to Roman Catholic bishops defending workers' rights, and warning of the "dehumanization excesses" of modern economic systems. It cites two fundamental Christian principles as the basis for a new approach to economic recovery.

First priority must be given to the real victims of the current recession — the unemployed, the poor, pensioners, women, and young people, the bishops declare in the statement, "Ethical Reflections on the Economic Crisis." Second, economic policies must reflect the realization that the right of workers is more important than the maximization of profits by corporations.

The bishops outlined a five-point short-term strategy for achieving a public and business policy to pursue:

- Unemployment, rather than inflation, should be recognized as the No. 1 problem in overcoming the present economic crisis.
- Policies should aim at creating permanent and meaningful jobs for people in local communities. These should emphasize increased production, creation of new labor-intensive industries for basic needs, and measures to ensure job security.
- A more balanced and equitable program should be developed for reducing and stemming the rate of inflation.
- Greater emphasis should be given to the goal of social responsibility in the current recession. This means that every effort must be made to see that cuts in social services, maintain adequate health care and social security benefits, and guarantee special assistance to the unemployed.
- Labor unions should be given a more decisive and responsible role in developing policies for economic recovery and employment.

Serving public needs

As long as technology and capital are not harnessed by society to the betterment of the common good, the bishops said, they are likely to become an enemy, rather than an ally in the development of a people.

"By placing greater importance on the accumulation of profits and machines than on the people who work in a given economy, the value, meaning and dignity of human labor is violated," the bishops said.

"By creating conditions for permanent unemployment, an increasingly large segment of the population is threatened with the loss of human dignity. In effect, there is tendency for people to be treated as an impersonal force having little or no significance beyond their economic purpose in the system."

Canada's present strategy for economic recovery, similar to that of the Reagan Administration, aims at restoring profitability and competitiveness in certain industries and providing more favorable conditions for private investment.

"The causes of inflation are seen as workers' wages, government spending, and low productivity rather than monopoly control of prices. In its measures to achieve recovery, government has strengthened business through corporate tax reductions and direct investment incentives, the statement observed.

Alternative approach

"In effect, the survival of capital takes priority over labor in present strategies for economic recovery," the bishops said. In offering an alternative approach, the bishops urge public and business policy to pursue:

- Unemployment, rather than inflation, should be recognized as the No. 1 problem in overcome the present economic crisis.
- Policies should aim at creating permanent and meaningful jobs for people in local communities. These should emphasize increased production, creation of new labor-intensive industries for basic needs, and measures to ensure job security.
- A more balanced and equitable program should be developed for reducing and stemming the rate of inflation.
- Greater emphasis should be given to the goal of social responsibility in the current recession. This means that every effort must be made to see that cuts in social services, maintain adequate health care and social security benefits, and guarantee special assistance to the unemployed.
- Labor unions should be given a more decisive and responsible role in developing policies for economic recovery and employment.

OPEIU and its newspaper: White Collar have subscribed to Press Associates, Inc.—a news service for labor union publications. The two columns on the facing page — "Work and Health" and "Washington Window" — are part of that service.

Beginning with this issue "Washington Window," which is a political, editorial column, will appear in White Collar. "Work and Health" will appear only when the subject matter is relevant to our white collar membership.

We think these are important additions to our newspaper, which will generate greater interest and appeal. They also impart information on timely issues on which our readers should be made more aware.

Dismantling OSHA

by Phillip L. Polakoff

"Your friend isn't dead yet—just terribly ill and weak."
The spokesman, having informed the crowd of anxious workers, turned and closed the door to the sickroom. The name of the agency: "OSHA." The Occupational Safety and Health Administration—to give the "patient" a full name—is being crippled by the Reagan Administration to a degree that could hardly be matched by the worst imaginable industrial accident.

But the clobbering of OSHA into near impotence is no accident. It is a calculated and blunt attack on the law Congress enacted in 1970 to give American men and women safer workplaces. This is not a straightforward attack. The eviscerating of OSHA is not being accomplished through the legislative amendment process. It is not being done in accordance with the will of the people. Polls show an overwhelming support for maintaining, even expanding, workers' on-the-job safety and health protections. It is not being brought about through judicial interpretations of the law, but even despite court decisions in some cases.

No. OSHA has been feinted and felled by shifty administrative footwork under the banner of "deregsulation" which has so tilted the rules in favor of the employer that the law, so far as workers are concerned, is approaching the point of uselessness.

Led by Reagan's head of the agency, Assistant Secretary of Labor Thomas G. Aucocir, the continuing assault over the last couple of years has:

- Gutted the agency's announced inspection procedure, one of its most effective weapons;
- Weakened penalties for safety and health violations;
- Uprooted regional offices to reduce fines and the number of contested citations;
- Delayed and soft-pedalled safety and health standards and regulations, with the assistance of the White House Office of Management and Budget;
- Undercut workers' right to file complaints, either in person or through designated representatives;
- Rescinded the rule that workers be paid when they accompany inspectors; and
- Slashed, with considerable help from the Reagan budget-cutters, the inspection staff from its authorized 1980 level of 1,600 (even then considered too small) to around 1,000.

The list of weakening actions could go on and on.

Figures compiled by the AFL-CIO from OSHA's own federal compliance activity reports show a dramatic fall-off in enforcement activity from January 1980 to June 1982. The only exception was a reported 11 percent gain in general-scheduled inspections.

But even that "exception" is misleading. Many inspections under OSHA's new "targeting" policy are limited to a review of employers' records rather than a comprehensive inspection. If the employer's records show a rate of accidents that is better than the national average, an OSHA inspector can decide that no further inspection is needed.

This "targeting" policy has exempted three-fourths of all manufacturing employers from routine inspection. The exemption has effectively removed 13 million workers from the protections the law intended them to have.

Further evidence of OSHA slackness can be seen in its sorry citation record:

- A drop of 11 percent in initial inspection citations (despite the emphasis on high-hazard industries);
- A plunge of 51 percent in Serious Citations issued;
- A nose-dive of 89 percent in Willful Citations.

The same sort of downward slide is evident in fines assessed against wrongdoers now that all penalties above $10,000 have to go to Washington for approval.

Between October 1979 and September 1980, OSHA levied 100 penalties of at least $10,000. Between April 1981 and March 1982, the agency slapped on only six.

That's not a sign that things are getting better—as any worker on the firing line every day knows. It's a near-last-gasp of a weakened agency.

Yet the need is tragically still with us. Although record unemployment in 1982 may have skewed the figures—an iconic "bright" spot—in 1981 alone, workers lost an estimated $5.1 billion in wages and another $3.4 billion was paid out in medical expenses. In 1981, on-the-job accidents claimed the lives of 4,360 workers and another 2.4 million suffered disabling accidents. Total costs of all occupational illnesses and accidents in 1981 was a staggering $32.5 billion.

A major question in 1982 is how long will Congress and the American people—especially working men and women—permit the Reagan Administration to keep on dismantling a hard-won right such as OSHA by executive actions and administrative end-runs.

Reagan at Halftime From Tragedy to Farce

by Press Associates, Inc.

It has been said that history repeats itself—first as tragedy then as farce. Has it ever happened in one presidential term? It's now halftime for the Reagan Administration and the quarterback is congratulating himself on a great first half. Well, he did smash a lot of records.

And that's the tragedy.

The tragedy is that President Reagan's policies established a record for the longest post-war recession.

The tragedy is that the Reagan team set a record for the highest unemployment rate in 40 years.

The tragedy is that the Reagan policies have pushed the number of unemployed and under-employed to an astonishing total of some 20 million.

The tragedy is that, in leading the 1981 tax cut on the Treasury, the Reagan team deprived the government of $750 billion in revenue which is a basic cause of Reagan's historic deficits.

The tragedy is that the Reagan game plan broke the 50-year-old record for business bank ruptcies and made foreclosures a common occurrence for farm families.

The tragedy is that the Reagan team, in the name of saving money in food stamps and school lunches and child nutrition, brought back hunger and malnutrition.

The tragedy is that, in its quest for "cheats" on the Social Security rolls, the Reagan team deprived many disabled of benefits and caused great suffering before most of the victims won their appeals.

The tragedy is that, as sociologists have documented for periods of high unemployment, the Reagan policies can fairly be said to have increased crime and delinquency, family breakup, alcoholism and mental ill health.

And that was only the first half.

The farce now unfolding shows that very few ideas of substance were discussed in the locker room at halftime.

The farce got under way a little early when the idea that every family should adopt a family on welfare was followed by the proposal that every employer hire one unemployed.

The farce picked up steam with the proposal to tax the unemployed but that was laughed off the agenda.

The farce continued, however, with the proposal to tax wealth benefits won by workers in negotiations. (See editorial on page 8.)

Then the farce took a strange twist with the revival of a subminimum wage for youths, a business favorite which studies show creates no jobs and in fact would displace the handicapped and learners now getting minimum pay.

The farce unfolding also would dangle wage subsidies in front of employers even though a truism of the New Jobs Tax Credit program reported employers as saying, "Orders determine the levels of hiring, not tax gimmicks!"

The farce also includes harebrained ideas like giving poor families vouchers to search for housing when housing is short and landlords are probably shrewder than the poor.

The farce becomes a little ridiculous when the President's chief economist promotes the idea of regressive consumption taxes to force savings for investment when that was what the 1981 tax cut was supposed to do.

The farce then turns bizarre when a "gang of 500" business leaders also urges consumption taxes, holding behind the facade of fairness to the poor, when many of these same groups benefited from the 1981 tax cut.

The President of the United States, meanwhile, is still reading the want ads. He told Chicago school kids that "scads of pages" of his prove there are jobs going unfilled because people are not trained to fill them.

If Mr. Reagan had turned to the news pages or TV news, he would have learned that thousands of people lined up in the freezing cold for a handful of jobs in Milwaukee and Chicago.

In the depth of the Great Depression, Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal put 4 million people to work in two months. The WPA later put 3 million to work within a year.

But FDR and his New Deal had political imagination and will, compassion for people and confidence in the nation's ability to solve its problems.

of benefits of OPEIU membership and sign them up. Through role-playing exercises, discussions, films and lectures the stewards learned each aspect of the steward's job. They were taught at the Knoxville session by instructors from Tennessee State University's Learning Center, and at the Chattanooga and Muscle Shoals sessions by professors from the University of Alabama in Birmingham's Center for Labor Education and Research.

Four Locals Participate

Four OPEIU local unions represent the TVA members. They are Local 52 in Muscle Shoals, headed by President Phil Watkins; Local 119 in Chattanooga, headed by President Jeanne Farmer; Local 273 in Chattanooga, headed by President Jerry Jackson; and Local 268 in Knoxville, headed by President Dalton Cooper. It was these Local Union presidents who requested the training for their stewards.

Lowe Retires

Although the vast majority of stewards came from TVA facilities, stewards representing other OPEIU members and shops attended as well. A few of these included the Department of Energy and East Tennessee Baptist Hospital (Local 268) and the Coca-Cola Bottling Company (Local 179). Spencer Smith is the President of Local 179.

The Local Union presidents also requested training for themselves, to improve their own skills at leading and representing the members. Although a date has not yet been set, those classes will likely begin in March 1983. It will in all likelihood concentrate on communications skills, political action activities, recordkeeping, and gaining information from management.

International Representatives

The International Union was represented at the stewards classes by Director of Organization Mark Reader, who addressed each session on TVA-OPEIU bargaining history and the recent (see insert); Research Director Gwen Wells, who is responsible for OPEIU educational programs and who served as reporter and photographer at the classes; International Representative and Acting Director of TVA Jon Heller, who coordinates all four Local Unions in their dealings with TVA; and International Representative Bill Kirby, who is temporarily assisting the TVA local unions in representing their members.

OPEIU Stewards attending the training classes each received an OPEIU educational certificate. More important, they received instruction on improving skills to better enable them to serve their members.

Other OPEIU locals have been offered the same opportunity for training programs.

Wisconsin Paper Industry Members

Now Average $10.20 Per Hour

With conclusion of their new contract, OPEIU Local 95 members at Consolidated Paper Company will average $10.20 per hour, reported Local Business Representative Steve Hartman. The more than 300 members at the Wisconsin papermaker, he said, will receive in excess of 15 percent in wage increases over the life of the two-year agreement.

Additional and excessive improvements were made, particularly in economic benefits. Just a few of these are:

- additional pay (50c) per hour for working as replacements for supervisors;
- increased meal allowances;
- travel allowance for temporary assignment to an out-laying plant, equal to one-half of straight-time pay;
- an additional one-half day holiday on Good Friday;
- an increase in safety shoe allowance to $30 in the first year and $35 in the second;
- extended health insurance coverage to six months during layoff;
- increased life insurance coverage;
- increased accidental death and dismemberment;
- employer-paid safety classes;
- increased maximum period for inplant hospital stay to 80 days;
- increased retiree death benefit;
- increased major medical lifetime maximum to $125,000;
- increased sickness and accident disability benefit to $155 in the first year and $160 in the second;
- increased pension minimum monthly benefit.

In addition to all of the above, the Local made significant gains in improving contract language. Altogether they achieved an outstanding contract for their paper industry members.

Contributing to the successful negotiations, Hartman reports, were the negotiating committee members. They were Unit Chairman Myron Sarge; Local Vice President and Trustee Dick Neustifter; Local Trustee Frank Lauwecz and Members Dan Lorenzen, Dale Falkovsky, John Polebitiski, Rachel Ristow, and Denis Reese. Hartman assisted.

Local 494 Elects New Officers

"I have continued and reinforced appreciation and respect for all of our office workers. Don't ever let anyone tell you you are not important to the smooth-running operation of a company, a bank, a union. They would all collapse without us," said Kenon Porter—the new President of Local 494 in Detroit, Michigan.

When recently asked how she liked her job as Local President of a major International Union, Porter responded that it has been exciting, hectic and inspiring. She has been particularly inspired by American workers themselves and especially her own members. She said that office workers, maintenance workers, and crafts workers are what keeps this economy and this country humming. "We should be darn proud."

Porter also thanked her new Board members, who are "the glue that holds everything together." Those new officers are Vice President Sandie Brimmer; Recording Secretary Cathy Binnington; Secretary-Treasurer Norine Rambow; Trustees Margaret Hall, Sandy Naples and Paula Young; Board Members Mary Hawkins and Judy Trumpbell; and Sergeant-at-Arms Sharon Fowler.
GREETINGS:

Local 2 Wins $400,000 and Bargaining Rights at D.C.’s Metro

The 200 transit employees have gained $400,000 in retroactive and their first union contract. The 300 workers have won bargaining rights at Washington, D.C.’s Transit Authority, commonly called Metro, reported Local 2 Business Manager and International Vice President Jim Tolin.

The fight for the employees’ right to be represented by Local 2 and to bargain collectively began in 1979. Following an organizing campaign and union election victory, Metro has fought to exclude 300 of the 500 members from bargaining, and to deny them their right to bargain.

Finally, in July 1980, an arbitrator ruled that Metro was required to recognize the bargaining unit of 500 and to bargain collectively. The Authority has adamantly rejected and forced the union to go to federal court for enforcement of the arbitration award. That court ruled in favor of Local 2 and the transit employees, ordering Metro to reinstate wage increases and to bargain.

The dispute centered on Metro’s contention that 300 of 500 employees placed in the bargaining unit through a democratically run election in 1980 were managers, supervisors or “confidential” employees who should not be represented by the union.

Metro, however, granted the 300 disputed employees 7.7 percent cost-of-living raises in 1980, and another 6.12 percent in October 1982.

The 200 employees that Metro recognized as covered by the union did not get raises, on the grounds that their wages were subject to collective bargaining. Metro did this despite the fact that such increases were a standing and long-existing policy at Metro, and at no time was Local 2 given the opportunity to bargain over the matter.

Sheridan said, “More than 13 months have passed since Local 2 filed its initial motion in U.S. District Court to preserve the rights of Metro employees to be represented by the union of their choice and to be protected from retaliation by Metro for exercising those rights. We believe it is now time that the Authority, in view of Judge Parker’s rulings, recognize its responsibility and Local 2 as the bargaining representative for Metro employees in the agreed-upon bargaining units and enter immediately into good-faith negotiations to reach a fair and equitable contract.”

Local 2 and the Employee Negotiating Committee are prepared to meet with the Authority to resume negotiations at the earliest possible date.

Local 179 Celebrates 35th Birthday

OPEIU Local 179 in Chattanooga, Tennessee, celebrated its 35th year of affiliation with the International Union. Local 179 represents members throughout private industry in companies such as the Mueller Company, U.S. Pipe & Foundry and Coca-Cola Bottling Company. OPEIU issued Local 179 its charter in 1947.

“It has been a rewarding and challenging 35 years,” said Local President Spencer Smith. “Both the members and Local 179 have gained remarkably from our affiliation with the Office and Professional Employees International Union. We look forward to our next 35 years and to organizing additional white collar employees who will benefit from OPEIU membership.”

At the celebration, three charter members—Pearl Graves, Beatrice Gay, and Gladys Follis—were awarded honorary lifetime membership cards, reported Smith.

Other Board members who were not present are Trustees Tony Phillips and Board Members Lisa Morris and Dwight Gardneiros.

Happy Birthday, Local 179!

Despite Recessions Local 329 Scores Big

OPEIU Local 329 members at the Knights of Columbus Insurance Company gained nearly 25 percent in wage increases in their new three-year agreement, report Local President Claire Pluff. The 346 members in New Haven, Connecticut, overwhelmingly voted in favor of the new agreement.

One of the negotiating members, Bernadette Cassidy, said, "This was no gift from management. We fought very hard for it and hung in there very long together. It was 346 people showing their unity."

After many negotiations meetings and a final 14-hour bargaining session, Pluff said she and the members were very pleased with the results. Not only, she said, were we able to make substantial wage improvements, but we gained important benefit and language changes as well.

Some of those changes include: a new dental plan; an increase in life insurance; a boost in the medical limit from $15,000 to $30,000; an increase in sick leave benefits; an increase of accumulated sick leave; and improved vacations leave and language on non-discrimination, safety and health, and subcontracting.

In addition, said Cassidy, we formed a six-member Janitor Evaluation Committee to evaluate each job in the bargaining unit, write an accurate job description, and assign an appropriate labor grade.

"It is expected that this huge undertaking, which is sorely needed, will take the next three years to complete," she said.

Finally, the Local gained a new expedited grievance procedure. For grievances on denial of vacation or leave of absences, the Local will use a panel of four arbitrators who will issue swift, fair settlements.

It is expected that the new procedure will result in speedy and less costly settlements for the Local 329 members.

Local 277 Rep Honored

OPEIU Local 277 Representative Don Wright.

Donald B. Wright, business representative for OPEIU Local 277 in Fort Worth, Texas, was honored by United Way of Metropolitan Tarrant County for serving on its 1982 United Way Campaign Cabinet. The cabinet consisted of the 32 top campaign volunteers responsible for organizing the fund drive. These cabinet members led 15,000 volunteers in raising $13.5 million for human services in Tarrant County.

Wright was chairman of the Labor Participation Committee, a support group devoted to developing favorable relations between organized labor and United Way, and for achieving labor's deserved recognition for participation in United Way activities.

OPEIU President John Kelly said that Wright was one of many OPEIU staff, officers, and members that were actively involved in community affairs. "Representing our members does not stop in the office or on the shop floor. To serve them properly we must also be involved in legislative and community activities as well. We are very pleased that Don is an activist, and a successful one at that. He is indicative of the young, dedicated trade unionist emerging today," he said.

Bank Members Win Arbitration

"Our members will not have their negotiated benefits taken away at the whim of any management," said President L. J. Sheridan of Local 2 in Washington, D.C. Sheridan was referring to the National Bank of Washington's attempt to extend working hours of Local 2 members to 40 hours per week. The Local was able to beat back that attempt in a winning arbitration case.

Sheridan noted that the vast majority of the Bank's employees have worked a less-than-40-hour week for many years, extending back to the beginning of the bargaining relationship in 1973. An unwritten traditional rule that the employee will stay until his/her work for the day is completed, whether that occurs before or after quitting time, has been questioned.

Although the contract contains a clause stating that 40 hours will constitute a regular work week, the provisions has simply been used to establish overtime pay and not to increase hours. And, the arbitratorarah said.

Sheridan said their victory hinged on a second contract clause: "No clause in this agreement shall be construed or interpreted as to imply any lowering of present working conditions and practices except as modified by this agreement."

Finding that the additional working time without additional pay would result in a net loss of pay and, therefore, a lowering of working conditions, the arbitrator ruled in favor of Local 2's members. Once again an OPEIU Local Union has protected its members from arbitrary treatment.

Local 268 Elects New Officers

Newly elected President Dalton Cooper of Local 268 in Kankakee, Illinois, was elected president of Local 268. As we begin a new year of service to our members, we hope we can continue to look to you for guidance and assistance. Also, we want to say to ourselves that we need you for any assistance you may need in carrying on the organizing work of our International."

Cooper was expressing the sentiment of the Local Union officers, who were recently elected by their members. The new board includes: President Cooper from the Department of Energy, Vice President Louis H. Warwick (Tennessee Valley Authority), Secretary-Treasurer Patricia M. Allen (TV A), Recording Secretary Katherine Myers (Local Officers), Trustees Freda Cooper, Dale Ston and Garnet Morgan (TVA), Executive Board members Louis H. Warwick (TVA), M. Hope Warren (TVA), (TVA), P. J. Thompson (East Tennessee Baptist Hospital), Connie W. Doton (East Tennessee Baptist Hospital), M. Dalton Cooper (DOE) and Polly Blackburn (DOE) and Sergeant-at-Arms Connie W. Doton (East Tennessee Baptist Hospital).

85 Gives to VOTE

We inadvertently printed last issue that OPEIU Local 95 contributed checks to the OPEIU's political action fund—VOTE—at the North Central Regional Educational Conference. It should have read: Local 85 from Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

And, Local 83 had again made VOTE contributions, this time in the amount of $3210.

The Local's President Joan Schlitz writes, "Our VOTE committee raised this by selling Danish Kringle at Thanksgiving time."
"Change the course" was the loud and clear message that the American voters delivered to the Reagan Administration earlier this year. People were fed up with escalating and unprecedented unemployment rates, record federal deficits, tax cuts for the rich at the expense of occupational health standards, undermining of prevailing wage laws—and the abandonment of compassion for the needy and aged.

Millions of workers, trade unionists worked to elect our friends and the friends of all working Americans, and to defeat our enemies. OPEIU members can be particularly proud of their achievement—their long hours working for candidates and at the polls, their efforts to register new voters, their unselfish contributions to Voice of the Electran. Your money and time was well spent.

The figures prove how important such involvement is, they show how successful our program to elect progressive candidates has been.

In the race for the U.S. House of Representatives, OPEIU contributed financial support to 43 candidates and had a 65 percent success rate. We elected such pro-people candidates as Pepper in Florida, Frost in Texas, Burton in California, Bosquard in Tennessee, Kohn in Massachusetts, O'Neill in New York, O'Sullivan in Maine, and delays in Wisconsin.

This was an extremely important election for us. The President, who up to that point had run roughshod over the Congress, now faces a new Congress of the type that did a 100-vote majority. This will force the Administration to negotiate with a branch of Congress, effectively controlled by the opposition party. You have already seen such negotiations on the new job bills proposed. No longer will the Administration be able to railroad through legislation that hurts the majority of the American public—the poor.

We can also be proud of our achievement in the Senate, although there was no shift of power in that branch. OPEIU contributed to 13 Senatorial races and had a 55 percent success rate. We helped elect candidates such as Metzenbaum of Ohio, Sasser of Tennessee, Sarbanes of Maryland, and Jackson of Washington.

We were even more successful in races for governorships, where 60 percent of our candidates were elected. High on the list of successes were Cuomo in New York, White in Texas, Anaya in New Mexico, and Blanchard in Michigan.

Although we know these elected candidates will not vote "our way" on every issue, we know they are more progressive than their opponents, that they support programs for working people, the elderly and poor. And, because we contributed heavily to their campaigns, they know who we are and are willing to listen to our point of view—even if they do not always support it.

But, we cannot become complacent after our victories. There is still a powerful conservative coalition, reduced though it may be in numbers. But, it can be overcome by a coalition of progressive Democrats and Republicans, who read the lesson of this election as a call to change course—a demand for jobs and justice. It can be overcome in 1984 when we elect more of our friends and defeat our enemies.

An Unheeding Administration

The Administration apparently is deaf. In spite of the message from the electorate, it continues in its course of gouging the American working people, while casing the burdens on the rich. The President, in error his advisors say, called for elimination of all corporate taxes. At the same time, his Administration has proposed to tax workers' health insurance benefits. Although he has withdrawn the first proposal, the second remains.

OPEIU is convinced that this plan to tax workers for a good part of health care benefits paid by em-employers is simply another way of victimizing workers and their families.

Such a tax would reduce health care coverage, do nothing to control soaring medical costs, and it represents an unnecessary government intrusion into the collective bargaining process.

Specifically, the proposal calls for placing a limit on tax-free employer contributions to the health insurance coverage of their workers. Currently, employers can deduct this cost as a business expense, yet it is not considered part of a worker's taxable income.

Whatever Happened To Corporate Taxes

President Reagan's recent off-the-cuff statement that corporate income taxes are "hard-to-justify" touched off a mini-scramble, and the administration backed away. But the fact is, corporate taxes seem to be on the way out, anyway.

In fiscal 1977, the corporate tax provided 15.44 percent of federal revenues. In fiscal 1982 the percentage dropped to 7.97, thanks to Reagan tax changes in 1981. This amount, too, will diminish in the years ahead.

Many firms, which take shrewd advantage of tax breaks, already pay nothing to the government. The 46 percent statutory rate is a laughing stock for almost all businesses with income over $100,000. The big oil companies for years, even with enormous profits, have been paying a lower percentage than individuals earning $10,000.

The scheme being pushed by the Administration and some of its supporters in Congress would cap the amount an employer could pay in tax-free coverage. Workers would be required to pay income taxes on employer payments beyond the specified ceiling. It is an inequitable way to raise revenues. It would also disrupt labor-management relations by forcing the repeating of agreements and undoing influencing future negotiations.

Besides meddling in collective bargaining, the proposed tax scheme would penalize workers in areas where medical costs are higher and discriminate against employees in groups with large numbers of older workers.

The tax would actually lead to a loss of insurance for many employees, who would be under pressure to choose lower cost, minimal coverage health plans. Workers would also be discouraged from joining health maintenance organizations and from obtaining preventive care, diagnostic services and early retirement.

Workers who over the years have sacrificed other fringe benefits to maintain adequate health coverage for their families would find themselves owning Uncle Sam money at tax time to maintain their hard-earned collectively bargained rights. The big winners would be their employers who would no longer have to pay the full cost of bargained health insurance.

The supporters of the scheme assert that the tax will control soaring medical costs. This theory, however, ignores the fact that the medical care market is dominated by doctors, not consumers. After the patient makes the initial decision to seek care, the demand for medical services—hospitalization, laboratory and diagnostic services, for example—is strictly in the hands of the doctor, not the patient.

This incredibly inequitable proposal only emphasizes the need for concerted action to persuade members of Congress not to go on the floor of the House, Senate and the Little to continue to draft their nickel in the 1984.

1983 OPEIU Convention

OPEIU is nearing another International Convention. This year’s triennial convention will be held June 5-10, 1983. As we approach that time, it is important that we reflect on the purpose of such meetings and on ways in which to make them more successful, more relevant to our membership.

Labor unions are democratic institutions. Officers and convention delegates are elected by the rank-and-file members to represent them and their interests in both the union and the workplace. They also over the years have rightly come to expect the Union to represent them effectively in political elections.

The convention is the supreme governing body of the Union. It is the convention that elects international officers and that sets policy for OPEIU for the three years following. With each vote the delegates build a platform of ideals and goals for OPEIU and its members. It is not a time for intellectual exercises or for esoteric resolutions.

OPEIU seeks to implement all resolutions passed by the delegates. For that reason, the resolutions must be pragmatic, attainable, and in the best interests of all our members.

No local union should propose resolutions to obtain changes in domestic and foreign policy if that local has not participated in the Voice of the Electran or can, in state, local and national resolutions.

It is too easy for a local to give lip service to resolutions—progressive and conservative—without also committing resources that will enable the International to implement them properly.

I have spent much time at conventions watching delegates debate resolutions of little or no concern to our own members, resolutions with little or any impact on their lives, and resolutions impossible to obtain because of insufficient resources.

In 1983 I would hope that we could put aside such resolutions and go on the floor of the Local to represent our members. I know that all of our locals and their delegates will work with me to attain this goal.
